

adjacent to the campus. Riding horses are available nearby at a moderate fee.

Climate: An elevation of 2400 feet assures warm but not unduly hot days and cool, refreshing nights. Summer and sport clothing including raincoats should be brought. In general people dress quite simply. Usual daytime wear consists of overall denim trousers or blue jeans, comfortable work shoes and shirts, shorts or slacks, with a sweater or jacket if it is cool. A light top coat for especially cool evenings may be desired. There are occasional semi-formal events at which long dresses are customary. Men never wear formal evening attire.

Accommodations: Students and campers will live in dormitories which are summer resort lodges converted to College use. These are large rustic frame buildings each with its central lobby and massive stone fireplace. There are available a limited number of rooms with adjoining baths and several large dormitory attics with baths and sun decks adjoining. Those attending will thus have room mates and are expected to care for their rooms. The College provides simple furnishings - beds and towels but not blankets or sheets and pillow cases. Blankets may however be rented for a small charge which covers necessary dry cleaning and normal wear. Bed linen and towels are laundered by the College without charge. A laundry room with washing machine is provided for those who wish to wash their own clothing, or soiled clothes may be sent to the local laundry.

Train and bus connections: Black Mountain is situated directly on one of the main scenic routes of the Southern Railroad. Round trip fare from New York: Coach - $29.92; Pullman - $44.00 plus berth. Individuals will be met at the train by special car at a charge of 50¢. The best train leaves the Pennsylvania Station New York City at 4:35 P M with streamlined coaches and reserved seats which are free but must be reserved some time in advance. There is one change at Salisbury, N C. The train arrives at Black Mountain at 8:35 A M. Another train, leaving New York City at 2:05 P M, arrives at Black Mountain also at 8:35 A M the next day.

The College is located on North Fork road one and one half miles north of State road number 70. State road number 70 runs east from Asheville to the town of Black Mountain and at the point where North Fork road intersects it the Army's new Moore General Hospital is located. Members coming by bus should get off here at North Fork road. They will be met if advance notification is given to the College.

Asheville (15 miles) and Black Mountain (6 miles) have good stores, medical facilities and movies. There are many nearby places of interest: Great Smoky Mountains National Park, Mount Mitchell, Norris Dam and the T V A and Blowing Rock.
